Arthur is a European Patent Attorney who began his career in the energy industry, working in nuclear power generation and energy risk management. From there, he joined an intellectual property law firm, where he began his training.

Arthur specializes in drafting and prosecuting patent applications, due diligence, and infringement analysis for clients in various fields, including refrigeration, medical devices, sportswear, consumer products and computer-implemented inventions. His high degree of commercial acumen attracts a range of clients to his practice, from major U.S. technology companies with complex portfolios of IP to start-ups filing their first critical patent applications.
