Freedom to Operate/ Third Party Risk Assessment

HG's business is to learn and understand our clients' innovations. This is particularly important when counseling clients regarding potential third party risks associated with releasing new technology or bringing a new product to market. Prior to taking such an important step for a business, HG identifies potential intellectual property risks and works with the client to mitigate any such risks.

This is especially relevant when dealing with third party patents. Our team of patent professionals have expertise across a wide spectrum of technologies and areas of science. This allows us to efficiently identify third party patents that potentially pose risk to our clients' commercial goals.

We work directly with our clients' engineers and scientists on technical issues to develop products and technology with the intent of mitigating potential risks.
